Sleeplessness

When you have a lot of dead weight in your stomach, as is the case of indigestion, the nervous system becomes so irritated and unstrung that it prevents your sleeping. You are not really suffering from insomnia, as some will tell you, but from indigestion, the primary cause of your sleeplessness. Now, there are many ways of getting yourself to sleep. You can use powerful drugs, narcotics, such as opium and laudanum. But the natural way to correct the disturbances in the stomach, to remove the food debris that is clogging the machinery of your body, and this is best and most quickly done with

WRITTEN FOR THE SUNDAY REPUBLIC.
The prize puzzle picture contest closed for the present last Sunday.

Two of the little ones who had sent in pictures in every contest had their final effort rewarded.

From the beginning of the contest the children took a deep interest in solving the puzzles. As the contest progressed, reinforcements were added and during the third week of the contest hundreds of little boys and girls who had not entered the lists before sent in drawings.
Failure to win prizes in the first three weeks' work had not diminished the number of competitors. Those who had been unsuccessful in previous contests continued to try.

"Willie, the Wheel Expert" afforded the youngsters a great opportunity to take advantage of The Republic's prize offers and in this contest many children from out of town were competitors. The little folks who live beyond the confines of a large city showed that the bicycle tourist who had passed their homes had been closely observed. The children living in suburban towns won a great many prizes.

To give the little ones a change of scene these were taken out into the country and introduced to the amateur photographer. The high wind and the wild bull had much sport with the photographer's cloth.
Week after week renewed interest was shown in the contest and failure in previous contests did not dampen the children.

Failure to send their names and addresses caused many to lose in the contest. Nearly 200 valuable prizes have been distributed among the 10,000 children who sent in work.

Many States were represented and the fact that a majority of the prizes went to Missouri children, was due to the large number of children contesting from this State.

Ham F. Bull, also a passenger, was in attendance, and when the steamship was off Sagaponack he caused a Marconiograph to be sent to Doctor Walker, in charge of Bull's private hospital, in this city, ordering a combination carriage-ambulance to be at the pier on the steamship's arrival. The prize puzzle picture contest closed for the present last Sunday.

OBSERVATORY LIBRARY NEARLY COMPLETED

Harvard's Collection of Star Photographs Invaluable for References.

NOW IN NEW BRICK BUILDING.

Outward Architectural Adornment Dispensed With to Leave Money for Interior of Structure.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 9.—The new building for the Harvard Observatory's collection of star photographs is now nearly completed, and within the next month the great collection of negatives of the observatory will be safely stored within its fireproof walls. The real importance of this little building is hardly calculable, for it is to house what is undoubtedly the most valuable photographic material from the astronomer's point of view, in the world, and for the first time put it beyond reasonable possibility of destruction. It is one of the benefits coming from the observatory from the anonymous gift of $20,000 received last February.

The collection of star photographs was begun some seventeen years ago, and since 1889 it has formed a complete history of the heavens. Every night pictures are taken both here and at the Harvard Station at Arequipa, Peru, so that northern and southern stars alike are included, and each plate, after careful examination, is put away in its individual cover, numbered and labeled, so as to be easy of identification and always ready for reference. For the first three years that this work was done the observatory had no place for it except the old wooden building which for half a century has been the main structure of the little group on "Observatory Hill."

Brick Building Constructed.
Ten years ago, however, a number of persons who were interested in this special work, and who appreciated the fact that the collection was always in danger of destruction by fire, raised a fund with which a brick building was constructed in accordance with the best methods available. The high wind and the wild bull had much sport with the photographer's cloth. Week after week renewed interest was shown in the contest and failure in previous contests did not dampen the children.

times increases, the floor above will be cleared to make room for them. The removal of some of the tables from the main building will leave more room for the computers, and for the examination of new plates, which is done with the minutest care every day. It will allow, too, of the more general use of the photographic library, which, being the only one of its kind in existence on anything like so large a scale, is constantly referred to by astronomers from all over the world, as well as being in continual use in the Harvard Observatory's investigations.

The location of the observatory is such that it is not readily accessible to the Cambridge Fire Department, the engines of which would need from 10 to 15 minutes to get into action if an alarm were sounded. Professor Pickering has therefore, out of the same "Anonymous Fund of 192" secured an efficient fire protection as possible on the premises. High-pressure hydrants of the most approved pattern have been put in, and hose has been provided to reach almost any part of the group of buildings effectively.
